Share the Fire

words and music by Samuel Pellman

Suddenly a sound like the blowing of the wind came from heaven and filled up every room.

Tongues like flames of fire came and settled on their heads, and the people were filled with the spirit of God.

Now take these flames to the sick and poor, that their distress might cease, and take these flames past the prison door to share the spirit of God.
God, to share the fire of God's love.

Listen to the sound like the rushing of the wind as the power of the spirit fills the room.

Flames of fire descend, and they ascend, above our heads, and the people go forth with the fire of God.

So take these flames to the shops and stores, and... glow with heaven's grace, and take these flames to the factory floors, and share the spirit of God, and share the fire of God's love.

Do you hear the sound, like whispers in the wind, of the peoples of the world now crowding round?

Listen to the tongues of the nations of the world, and feel the love of God for us all.

Now take these flames to the distant shore, and shine with acts of praise, and take these flames to the fields of war to light the way to peace, and share the spirit of God, and spread the fire of God's love.
